Scientific Webinar

AABPS recently organized a highly successful scientific webinar, bringing together experts and enthusiasts from the pharmaceutical field. The event, held on October 11, 2024, focused on "Immunotherapy: A Prospective Therapeutic Potential Against Hematological Malignancies," and was led by Dr. Mohammad Sohrab Hossain, a renowned expert in immunology and cancer treatment.

Dr. Hossain, the Director of the Emory Integrated Biorepository Core, presented groundbreaking advancements in immunotherapies, including CART-T cell development, humanized mouse antibodies, and preclinical strategies for targeting hematological malignancies.

The webinar featured presentations from leading scientists and provided participants with an opportunity to engage with the speakers, ask questions, and share insights, fostering a vibrant exchange of knowledge. Dr. Hossain highlighted the importance of quality control in CART-T cell development and explored the future potential of immunotherapy in cancer treatment. The session left attendees inspired and informed about the innovative treatments that are reshaping the landscape of cancer care. This successful event marks a significant step in AABPS's commitment to ongoing education and professional development, further advancing the understanding of cutting-edge therapies in the pharmaceutical field.
